What is the SRVF?

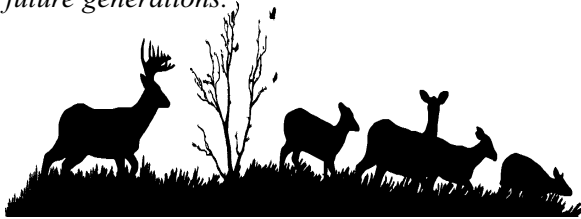

The Scioto River Valley Federation

(SRVF) is a community-oriented, nonprofit river organization that was formed in the Fall of 1991 in response to a proposed water supply dam on the Scioto River. Hundreds of acres of farmland, a multitude of homes, and the free-flowing Scioto River north of Bellpoint, Ohio were in danger of destruction.

The community joined together in a united resistance to this threat. When the dam was dropped from the list of water source options in July of 1992, the Federation did not dissolve.

The possibility of losing this scenic river valley helped people realize its value—the wildlife, rare plants, animals, birds, and aquatic life, the acres of rich bountiful farmland, the historic homes that comprise an important part of our heritage, and the value of the ecosystem to our environment and to all of the people who make their home in this watershed.

As a result, the Federation has remained focused and dedicated to its original mission, to preserve and protect the Scioto River for future generations.

The Focus of the Federation

The Federation directs its efforts toward the preservation and enhancement of the Scioto River corridor through community-oriented ways:

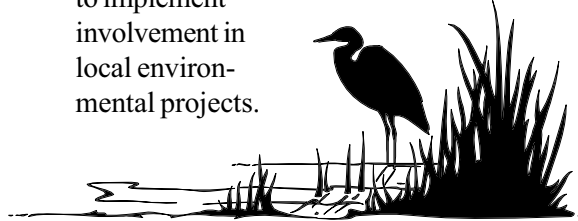

The Price Nature Preserve serves as an environmental educational area for children and adults alike in their quest to learn about the value of the ecosystem within the watershed.

The SRVF Watershed Coordinator, our community ambassador, maintains a storehouse of river information and helps teach environmental awareness and encourage responsible stewardship through community outreach programs.

The Scioto River Sweep, an annual river clean up event, brings together dozens of people who scour the banks of the river to eliminate unsightly trash and debris.

The Adopt-a-Highway campaign has the Federation involved with cleaning debris and litter from a two-mile area of State Route 257 in Delaware county.

Environmental awareness is strong, with the Federation working with local communities, schools, and agencies to implement involvement in local environmental projects.
